The Enrolment Process - Certificate Program

(This document is current from January 2010.)

Thank you for your interest in the Process Oriented Psychology training program (also known as Process Work.). Process Work is a wide spectrum method of facilitation that studies and works with the dynamics of human experience. As such it is useful in working with individuals, couples, groups and organisations. The process oriented paradigm values and includes within its scope both inner and outer experiences and the dynamic relationship between them.

ANZPOP Inc is a practice-based institution that provides training in Process Oriented Psychology therapy and practice in Australia. As part of the International Process Oriented Training Network it is affiliated with centres in Portland Oregon, USA, Switzerland, England, Japan and other countries.

Certificate Program

The Certificate Program is a synthesis of experiential work and theoretical training in the basics of Process Oriented Psychology. It is designed to be an adjunct to other professional training qualifications or life experience. As a self-directed study program the time taken for completion varies considerably from student to student but it is possible to complete all requirements within two years. The program encourages each student, in collaboration with an adviser, to design a program tailored to their individual needs and interests. The Certificate in Process Oriented Psychology does not include the clinical skills training necessary to qualify as a Process Oriented therapist.
